AIR FORCE COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

The Air Force Community Partnership program has been heralded by our Wing Commanders and community leaders as an ideal forum of exploring win-win partnerships.

In an effort to "Make Every Dollar Count," the Air Force has made a concerted effort to cultivate partnerships between our installations and the local communities.

Since January 2013, the Air Force Community Partnership program has inspired 53 installations and communities to partner across a wide range of initiatives.

Beyond the tangible savings, the program creates an invaluable forum for fostering relationships and promoting innovation.

The Air Force process tapped into the intellectual capital and innovative spirit of installation and community leaders to find creative ways to accomplish the Air Force mission and enhance communities.

Installations and communities now have the framework and tools needed to finalize many of the initiatives identified to date, such as shared medical/EMT training, joint small arms ranges, and shared refuse management services.

Installations and their communities developed more than 1,000 initiatives, and signed 200 agreements that generated $39M in Air Force benefit and $24M in community benefit.

Without losing focus on fostering a partnership mentality across the Air Force, and while continuing to strengthen its foundation by building upon concepts under development, we are now turning our attention to cultivate initiatives that show significant promise of large returns-on-investment or have Air Force-wide application.

From working with local municipalities to sharing small/large weapons firing ranges and sharing ballfields, and golf courses, the potential to save Air Force resources while strengthening relationships with the community is huge.

The Air Force Community Partnership program will transition to the Air Force Installation and Mission Support Center by Fiscal Year 2018; Air Force Headquarters will retain policy responsibilities.
